

New sculpture to honour George Floyd?

Did the death of George Floyd also show the significant lack of black historical sculptures?

Why should we still commemorate people with statues?

Commemoration has been passed down throughout history, as of having statues of American presidents to ancient Egyptian sculptures. Tribute, it's a word people cross many oceans to see, yet today, in the century we live in, we all very much question why should we honor the past in a way that makes the past permanent and not the change of the future?

The doubtful views on sculptures have been purely produced through allowing controversial and manipulative historical icons to be honored and are still being unrightfully praised by society.

So many of the sculptures around are world are still honoring racist white men, yet humanity has been censored from the deep backgrounds of out so called "heroes", why? Because even being in a diverse society, today we are being lied to because those in the wrong normally travel caring their privilege with then.

Despite the damage statues have done to our humanity, we can write the past to re-write the future. Starting by paying tribute to the people just like us; humble and unlawfully hurt.

Street Monuments in America to remember George

Memorials are all over the world for many reasons why should we remember George Floyd?

Who is George Floyd?

George Floyd was an African- American man who was born in Houston, Texas; later in his life he moved to Minneapolis, where he was confronted by the police on the 25th May 2020 the same day he died.

Minneapolis police were responding to a call about a suspicion of counterfeit money and soon targeted Mr. Floyd.
